▲ Manager's Comment

MSCI China Index decline by 4.48% in November, due to the lack of incremental stimulus policies in real estate and consumption in China, coupled with concerns over tariffs escalating under the Trump administration. On November 6th, Trump secured at least 270 electoral votes, declaring victory in the 2024 presidential election. In Trump's victory speech, he praised the Republican control of the Senate, stating that the United States had given them "unprecedented strong authorization". On November 25th, President-elect Trump of the United States stated that he would impose a 25% tariff on all products entering the United States from Mexico and Canada and a 10% tariff on all goods imported from China.

Looking forward, we maintain our long-term positive view of the Chinese equity market. The Central Economic Work Conference scheduled for December, amidst increased global uncertainty brought about by the change in administration in the United States, may exhibit a certain degree of flexibility in setting the economic development tone and policy direction for 2025. It is likely to sustain a proactive stance, with an implicit economic growth target of around 5% and a leaning towards expansionary fiscal and monetary policies. At the industry level, real estate and consumption are still the two key areas of focus for this conference, while innovation in technology and accelerated opening-up will also be major drivers for high-quality development. In terms of portfolio positioning, we will continue to seek a balance between value and growth.
